

You have decided to start your own village, but you're on a dangerous desert planet with no resources in sight. All feels lost until you see giant crystal entities swimming through the sand.

By riding a "Chrysalis" (or plural chrysalises) you can harvest their materials and create buildings to expand your village and unlock special tools and abilities.

- a quiescent insect pupa, especially of a butterfly or moth.
- the hard outer case enclosing a chrysalis.
- a transitional state

Chrysalises are attracted by sound whether it is intentional or accidentally running through their territory. Be careful when attempting to ride one for one misstep can be fatal.

Chrysalises can consume smaller chrysalises to evolve their materials into either a better/stronger version of their own material or a new material altogether. If your chrysalis is too small to consume the required type of chrysalises to gather needed materials, then you can consume enemies and smaller chrysalis to grow. Beware changing your chrysalis to the wrong material while trying to grow.

If cannibalism doesn't sit right with you, there is another way, you can painstakingly harvest each material individually and mix them together to get the required material.

Building your village is only limited to the buildings that you need. Position, colors and decorations can be organized by you.

Connecting generators to buildings with circuits will supply power. Be sure to manage your resources or things will begin to fail.
